THE LOUD MINORITY

BY ED WATKINS

Talk about breaking the sound barrier! The trick is to do it the way Frank Foster does it. He and his group The Loud Minority know just how to work an audience up to fever pitch. Before you know it, you're clapping your hands, tapping your feet, and standing up at the end to give these wonderful guys a rousing ovation.

Twenty pieces (count 'em—and don't forget those conga drums), it's enough to usher in a Big Band Era all its own. And it couldn't be done without Frank Foster, composer/arranger/conductor, a tenor sax man who was big with Basie and is even bigger now—he'll play any sax you hand him plus clarinet! Subtly he gets just what he wants from his fabulous crew, and when the joint is really jumping he throws in some dance steps too.

A big band for a master musician and a life-affirming group! A big band also for Jack Kleinsinger for winding up his

By way of contrast, the other half of the bill saw the return of Chet Baker, the trumpet player/singer who made it big with Gerry Mulligan some 20 years ago. With his new all-star group, he proved that he could still get it all together, particularly in the softer numbers when he was crooning those sweet jazz songs much the same as he did when he was starting out.

Kleinsinger began the evening's festivities by introducing his surprise guest, the first musician ever to walk out on stage at these "Highlights in Jazz" wingdings. It was guitarist Gene Bertoneini, who has played with Lena, Tony, Steve & Eydie, you name 'em. Whether playing solo or with the excellent backing of pianist Hal Galper, bassist Dave Shapiro and drummer Jimmy Madison, Bertoneini wove a quiet spell that had the NYU crowd enraptured.

That's the way to give a concert, and let's hope jazz fans third season of "Highlights in Jazz" concerts at NYU with such a memorable climax. Pounding, swinging rhythms that spring from Afro-American roots to encompass Latin sounds and modern jazz.

will respond in droves to the new subscription deal Kleinsinger is offering for next season. (For details, contact "Highlights in Jazz," 635 Allerton Ave., Bronx, N.Y. 10467.) And don't forget, you heard it here first.

Top-flight jazz, by Jack's crowd

By RON EYER

Guru Jack Kleinsinger has been turning NYU's Loeb Student Center into a citadel of sophisticated jazz in recent years, and a bonafide of bonafides thronged in Monday night for the last of his current series.

The attractions were the Chet Baker quintet, Frank Foster's Big Band Loud Minority (meaning 20 and black) and, as "mystery guest," guitarist Gene Bertoneini.

Contrasts were, of course, major, but they all had a lot in common. Baker's group and Bertoneini were free to noodle in highly individual terms, while Foster's 20 were programmed to written music—a necessity for so large an aggregation. Yet they all had virtuoso musicianship and total command of their instruments, which gave them a freedom of expression limited only by their abundant creative imagination.

Bertoneini showed his credentials in a free improvisation on a Chopin etude, dipping into enharmonic modulation and impressionistic broken chords bespeaking top-drawer artistry.

Both groups brought forth resplendent soloists and trumpet-player Baker was no mean vocalist in some ballads. Baker's Hal Galper, and Foster's Nicky Tucker, were remarkably inventive on piano.

Strong contributions to Baker's set were made by Dave Shapiro, bass; Bob Nover, alto sax, and Jimmy Madison, drums. Foster's own muscular sax was complemented by Gene Taylor's bass, Charlie Persip's drums and Waymon Reed's trumpet. But Foster's whole band would have shone to better advantage with less emphasis on the "loud" part of its title.

It's Festival time again and the granddaddy of them all is back in the Big Apple for another season. Space does not permit the entire Newport program to be printed herein, but some dates changed since you last read about it in these pages. Best to call 212-787-2020 or JAZZLINE 312-421-3592. The concerts for June 27 and run thru July 8.

Jack Kleinsinger's "Highlights in Jazz" presents Chet Baker and an all-star group and Frank Foster and the Loud Minority June 16 at NYU's Loeb Student Center.

Helen Humes is back at the Cookery, happily, for the month of June. Creative Music Studio of Woodstock, N.Y., holds Intensive Studies thru the 22nd of June concluding with three days at Sam Rivers' Studio Rivbea.

Buddy's Place hosts Thad Jones and Mel Lewis and the Jazz Orchestra with comic David Brenner thru June 21. And for Newport Buddy's salutes and recreates Dizzy Gillespie's Big Band June 23 thru July 3. Then Woody Herman and the Herd come in July 7.

The Five Spot continues its top-name policy when Cecil Taylor returns June 17 thru June 29, "at least" says Joe Termini, proprietor.

Michael's Pub brings Red Norvo in for the month of June with Marian McPartland taking over for July. The Bette Midler show

New York

As we anticipate the Newport Jazz Festival New York for 1975, so do the clubowners and concert producers. Jack Kleinsinger's "Highlights in Jazz" is presenting Frank Foster's twenty-piece orchestra called The Loud Minority for a premiere at NYU's Loeb Student Center on June 16. Chet Baker brings an all-star group onto the same bill.

Chet is at Stryker's every Monday and Tuesday and has been known to sit in on other groups, such as the recent appearance of Don Elliott on melophone. Chuck Wayne and Joe Puma are in every Sunday. Eddie Hazel comes in for the last two weeks in June.

Musicians gather to hear their colleagues, as was witnessed by the appearance of the Great Jazz Trio. Spanning three generations, Hank Jones, Ron Carter, and Tony Williams played before SRC patronage at the Village Vanguard. Joe Farrell comes in June 3. Milt Jackson June 10. Pharoah Sanders June 17.

Chicago and the Beach Boys head for Madison Square Garden June 12, 13, 14 and an added June 15 performance.

Talk about notices! Cecil Taylor himself never realized he had such a following. His recent two weeks at the Five Spot drew raves and an engagement for June 17 at least through Newport time.

The Cookery marks the return of Helen Humes for June. Red Norvo holds down that month at Michael's Pub.

The Bette Midler-Lionel Hampton revue at the Minskoff has been extended through June 21. Jazz Vespers at St. Peter's 64th St. and Park Ave. has Wilfredo Velez Octet June 8; Andrea Brachfeld Quartet has the pulpit June 15.

Also featured, will be Chet Baker and an all-star group. Baker came to fame playing trumpet with the Gerry Mulligan Quartet. His current C.T.L. album, "She Was Too Good To Me", is on the best selling charts, and his recent "comeback" concert at Carnegie Hall in November '74 was a complete sellout. After two decades, he

He is a member of the Collective Black Artists Ensemble and is also on the faculty of the State University at Buffalo. He will get together a twenty piece orchestra for the date.

Jack Kleinsinger will be presenting the last of a current series of "Highlights In Jazz" concerts, preceding a summer hiatus, on Monday, June 16th, at 8:00 P.M., at the NYU Loeb Student Center, 566 LaGuardia Place, New York City. The concert will feature the big band sound of tenor saxophonist Frank Foster and
